Hi, Neighbor

by Mac Rex Graham

Having had sunshine and flowers all through the past winter, folks in California are apt to miss the full significance of Easter in the awakening of Nature.

However, the full meaning and the glory of the resurrection of Christ is brought with joy and thanksgiving throughout the length and breath of our State by the impressive Easter Sunrise Services held on mountain tops, in parks and on the beach, in homes and in the churches.

★ ★ ★

Easter Day should mark the world's Thansgiving Day—When every tongue should utter praise and thanks to God for the supreme gift—life everlasting through the death on the cross and the resurrection of his Son.

"He is not here: for he is risen—" the last recorded words of angels' messages given this world during the Savior's life upon this earth constitute our hope of eternal life.

Public Schools Week April 23-27

The Thirty-Second Annual Public Schools Week will be observed throughout California, April 23 to 27, as announced by Joseph Quest, Worshipful Master of Masonic Lodge 407. Quest has appointed Lewis Smith as chairman of local Masons' committee for Public Schools Week. Theme for this year, "The Public School—An American Heritage," is particularly appropriate since our American freedoms are being challenged in this country as well as throughout the world," stated Smith.

Public Schools Week was initiated by Masons over three decades ago, and lodges of the order have promoted the observance annually since that time.

Masons are only one of many groups who promote this program, which features visits to the schools, exhibits of school work, and meetings. Masons hold that the public schools are not only an American heritage but are essential to the preservation and extension of the American heritage itself. Our representative democracy can improve conditions locally and nationally only through a strong program of free public education which provides equal opportunity for all.

Home Conditions Reflected in Youth Actions says Priest

The Rev. Father Edward Johnson, former editor of Southern Cross, was the guest at Parents Guild Thursday evening. He stressed the need of parents meeting the child on his own age level in order to understand child behavior. He is of the opinion that it is a bad parent rather than a bad child which creates child problems. Often bad behavior is the result of parental attitudes or home conditions.

Mrs. Ferd McClintock, Mrs. Paul Leitner, Mrs. B. Chappell, Milton Read, Mrs. D. R. Sperandio, Mrs. Vernon Mathews and Mrs. L. B. Styner were elected to serve on the nominating committee.

Growing School Population Adds to PTA Work

Growing school population has far-reaching results evidenced by re-organization plans for Mt. Helix Council P.T.A. on Wednesday, March 28, at 9:30 a. m. in Vista La Mesa Christian Church according to Mrs. Byron Netzley, council president.

P. T. A. units in foothills will attend with full representation to organize three councils in place of Mt. Helix Council, under permission of State Board of California Congress of Parents and Teachtrs. Two elementary councils and one secondary council is planned to include P.T.A.s by geographical division at elementary level and all new secondary schools to be finished in near future including Grossmont and Helix High Schools.

C.C.P.T. officers and chairmen of 9th District will attend to assist in re-organization. They include Mmes. G. G. Edwards, president; Hal Crow, parliamentarian; G. Dear and Charles Hunter, extension committee. All unit presidents and members in present council should be present to elect nominating and by-laws committees for each new council. An honorary life membership will be presented by Mrs. Arlo Sperry, chairman.

Sack lunches will be followed by dessert and coffee served by hostess units, Lemon Grove, Monterey Heights and Vista La Mesa P. T. A. with Mmes. T. A. Keeton, Guy Winton, and LeRoy Birch in charge.

More Homes Means More School Pupils

The Board of Trustees of the Lemon Grove School District has called a special election for Friday, April 13, to increase the legal tax limit for school purposes by 50c. This was done at the request of many citizen groups in our community, who realize that the school budget, with present revenues, cannot meet the demands resulting from increased enrollment, new homes, and expanded schools.

Lemon Grove now leads all other unincorporated districts in San Diego County in construction. During the past year, 1180 new homes were built here. New homes means more children for local schools.

A new addition to any household means budget problems. When Lemon Grove Schools have at least 250 additions every year, that budget presents even greater problems. In 1940 there were 279 children enrolled; now there are 1820 in classes, with over 2000 expected next year. That means that twice as many children are entering kindergarten as are graduating!

But with all this increased construction and population, Lemon Grove still has little industry. The homes will be taxed, but each of those homes will send one, two, or three children to school, and it costs four times the tax yield of one home to educate a child. The large industrial areas outside of our district collect the high taxes, while we, as a residential area, collect the children.

As a result, we are now a low wealth school district. Lemon grove has $3,500 in taxable property for each child in school. The average school district in this state has $10,000 in taxable property for each child in school. The wealth of a school district is not related to the income of its residents. It is simply the ratio between the number of children in school and the total taxable wealth of that district.

There are but two sources of funds for operating our schools and meeting the rising expenses, (1) allocation from the State general fund, and (2) local property taxes.

In the past three years, bills have been submitted to the State Legislators in order to provide more State money for local districts, but each time those bills have been defeated. For that reason there is no reason for optimism this year concerning additional State money to meet expenses. The only answer seems to be more local support.

The tax limit of 90c per $100 for operating our schools was set here in 1933. Then you could buy a pound of meat for 16c! This is 1951, and the year presents an entirely different picture. No one can operate a home, a business, or a school on a budget established 18 years ago. In order that free public education maintain its high standards in our community, backers of the proposed increase urge a "Yes" vote on April 13.

Foothill PTAs Host to Ninth District

Foothill P.T.A.s will host 9th District, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, for the first time on Monday, at 9:45 a. m. in La Mesa Youth Center when Mt. Helix Council with Grossmont P.T.A. in charge will welcome over 300 members from all parts of San Diego county.

Mrs. Marvin Owen of North Hollywood, vice president and Director of Organization for California Congress, will head the program with the subject, "Is the Tone of the Home in Tune With our Times?" Agenda will include election and installation of 9th District officers, by-laws revisions, followed by 90c luncheon with reservations to be phoned to 9th District office, W 8-2913, by Friday, March 23rd. Child care will be provided by Child Study department from Grossmont High School. Parents are requested to bring toys to share during the morning.

Painter Feels Good Again

HADACOL Supplies Vitamins B¹, B², Niacin and Iron Which His System Locked

When a man works hard all day, he has to get a good night's sleep in order to keep going. Take Mr. Tony Wesalick of 1010 Tabor St., Houston, Texas, for example. Up until a few months ago Mr. Wesalick just couldn't sleep, had no appetite, and was bothered with indigestion. Then he heard about HADACOL and started taking it. A painter by profession, Mr. Wesalick says that now he gets up in the morning feeling so rested, and so full of energy that he's almost never tired any more. He eats everything he wants without being troubled with indigestion, and has a wonderful appetite since HADACOL helped overcome his deficiencies of Vitamins B¹, B², Niacin and Iron.

Here is Mr. Wesalick's own statement: "I was run-down and I would get up in the morning feeling as if I hadn't slept at all. My appetite was bad, and I just didn't feel like eating, and when I did eat I had terrible indigestion. After a bottle and a half of HADACOL I felt much better. I have now taken about five more bottles of HADACOL and can eat and enjoy everything I want. I sleep much better and feel more rested. HADACOL has done this for me."

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied. —Adv.

The Iron Curtain

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S well-coined phrase "the iron curtain" has now become so universal that some people really believe the Soviet border is encased in iron. Actually, however, the curtain is made of barbed wire—and rusty barbed wire at that.

This writer visited the southernmost segment of the iron curtain today at a spot where democratic Turkey and Communist Bulgaria meet. This border is the start of a long tangled barricade zigzagging north past Hungary, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Germany and Poland. And though the fields of winter barley are just as green on both sides of this barbed-wire barricade, it might just as well have been made of iron as far as free exchange of human intercourse is concerned.

I drove up to the curtain in a jeep with Captain Fethi Seckin and Lieutenant Ali Aksoz of the Turkish army. The latter is in command of a ten-man detachment guarding the Kaprikule outpost. The road leading to the curtain was paved with centuries-old stone and beside the road were Roman wells built by Emperor Adrian. But the traffic leading to the barbed-wire curtain, aside from an ox team pulling a John Deere disc drill, a tribute to the Marshall plan, was nil.

Suddenly the road ended. Ahead was an iron gate bearing that international English word known to every tongue: "Stop." Beyond it was another gate slightly rusty and delapidated bearing the words "Bulgaria" in both French and Cyrillic. This was the iron curtain and the place which Turks call Serhad, which significantly has two meanings: the frontier and the neckline where one's head is chopped off.

Blockhouses Guard Curtain

Alongside the gate was a series of blockhouses—one on the Bulgaria side, a little shabby with some of its windowpanes missing, and two on the Turkish side, both new and orderly. One Turkish blockhouse—set back from the iron gate but connected with it by a series of trenches—housed troops.

I climbed stairs inside the thick-walled parapet to the tower on top of which a Turkish soldier stood scanning the landscape through field glasses. Through his glasses we could see a Bulgarian guard in the tower on the opposite side of the iron curtain, scrutinizing us. From time to time he would run to the telephone evidently to notify his headquarters about our party. Aside from this, there was almost no movement on the frontier. The sturdy walls, pierced with rifle slots, looked down on nothing more than the winter barley fields and the long, long barricade of barbed wire extending north.

Prisoners Escape

A herd of water buffalo grazed in the distance. They did not know the difference between communism or democracy, between Russianized Bulgaria or Turkey—to which the Truman doctrine is supplying arms and Marshall plan aid. They only knew that the grass was just as green on either side.

"Sometimes," remarked Captain Seckin, "sheep or buffalo get under the wire and cross to the Bulgarian side and the Communists shoot them. Our farmers get no chance to herd them back." Sometimes, also, I learned, Bulgarian political prisoners sneak through the barbed wire at night to give themselves up to Turkish authorities. This happens at the rate of two or three times per month and they tell a story of harassment and political suppression in what once was a relatively democratic country.

Climbing down from the watch tower we moved closer to the iron curtain to the second Turkish building. This one was just six feet from the gate separating the two countries.

On rare occasions an official with a properly visaed passport is permitted to pass through this gate and customs officials are kept on the Turkish side to handle such transits. We sat down a few feet from the gate to drink coffee with the customs officials. The weather was cold but the sun was warm, and I pulled my chair out onto a stone platform in the sunshine in full view of the Communist guards peering down through rifle slots in their watchtower fifty feet away.

I don't know and never will know what they thought of the stranger—the civilian dressed in western clothes who sat and drank coffee just below them.

I don't even know whether they recognized me as an American but the Turkish guards, who watched them from the tower with their field glasses, reported that, on the opposite side of the iron curtain, there was more scurrying and more frantic telephoning back to their headquarters.

However, the sun was warm and the coffee delicious and we lingered talking about the days when the army of Sultan Beyazid battled with the armored knights of the Polish king and the grand marshal of France.

FIXER'S WIFE . . . Mrs. Jeanne Sollazzo, wife of Salvatore Sollazzo, departs in cab after visiting her husband in New York City prison. Sollazzo is held in connection with bribery of college basketball stars and is under federal eye.

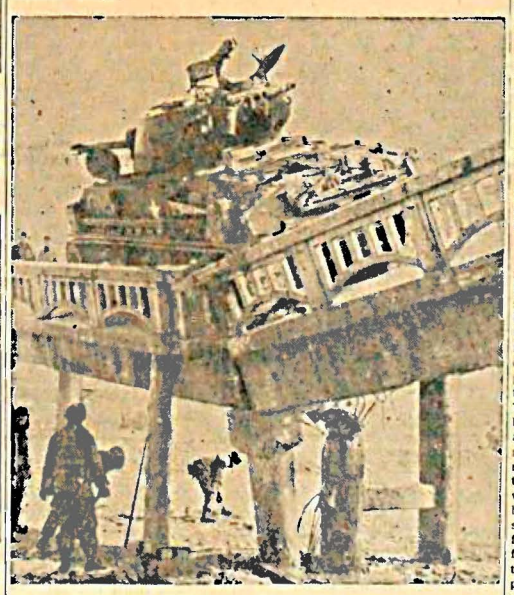
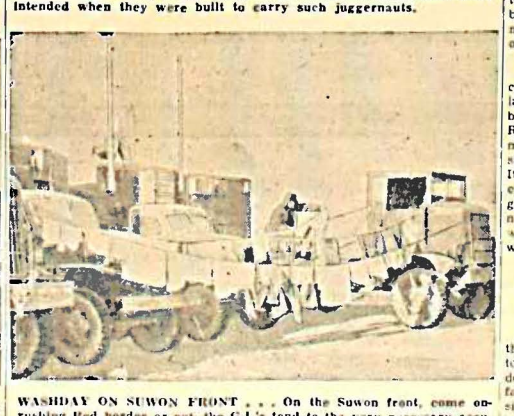
RESTRAINED FROM COMMITTING SUICIDE . . . His suicide attempt foiled, Arthur Dehn, 22, Milwaukee, Wisc., sobs and struggles as police lead him forceably from the Michigan Ave. bridge in Milwaukee. The youth, partially disrobed and shoeless, was seized after he had placed one leg over the bridge rail to jump into the icy river. Taken in a patrol wagon to the station, he was booked on a disorderly conduct charge.



IT'S A HOLDUP IN KOREA . . . Men of the eighth engineering battalion are shoring up a collapsed bridge with logs in an attempt to hold up the tank whose weight caused the collapse. They have called a tank retriever to the rescue. Many of the bridges in Korea were never intended when they were built to carry such juggernauts.



WASHDAY ON SUWON FRONT . . . On the Suwon front, come onrushing Red hordes or not, the G.I.'s tend to the very necessary occupation of keeping their togs clean. In lieu of a more conventional clothes pole and line to support the wet garments, Staff Sergeant Eugene A. Jordan, Evansville, Ind., makes use of army vehicles lined up at the Suwon airport. Any dirty North Korean who splashes mud on this fresh wash had better look out.

Banks and Government Debt

SINCE JULY 1, 1950, the government has spent more than it took in. The government now owes $255,979,870,517. Although the government is not taking in as much money as it is spending, it is paying all bills promptly. No one with a bill to collect is left standing on the steps of the treasury building to wait for more money to arrive. I have frequently wondered about the government's continued cash operations and have just had the answer.

Government bills are being paid with the money of American bank depositors from both saving and checking accounts.

The government demands that each bank maintain an extra reserve in addition to that maintained for the protection of depositors. This is a sum equal to a prescribed percentage of deposits. Against this extra reserve, the government writes checks.

So, out of the money of depositors, the government writes checks in settlement of its debts when sufficient taxes have not been received. Simple, isn't it? People with bank accounts are financing government deficits.

I know of one rural bank that is forced to carry $4 million dollars of extra reserve so the government may draw on the bank for all or any part of that amount. The government pays no interest on that reserve it forces the bank to keep.

But the bank must pay the deposit insurance covering its depositors. The people of the community are denied the right to borrow any part of the $4 million. The denial affects not only the bank's earning, but the accommodations it can offer its patrons. The local economies are affected.

I do not know whether it was congressional or presidential edict that demanded this extra reserve, but it is a long step on the road to socialism. It socializes the money of people with bank accounts. If it is the result of presidential edict, it is a long step toward dictatorship. When government can control people's money, it can control all their activities.

The fact the government is paying its bills does not mean it is not going into the red. Bills are being paid from American bank deposits to the detriment of the banks' stockholders at a cost to the communities the banks serve.

It is fair to assume that the people of no community would have approved of such methods of government financing had they known what was happening. But neither the government nor the banks explained. It was just another of the moves the clever guys in Washington get away with.

Now that the method is well established, it undoubtedly will be continued until something more drastic takes its place.

Not since the period during and immediately following World War I have American farmers enjoyed such prosperity. During that former lush period, which they expected would continue indefinitely, the farmers went wild in the investment of more land. Then the war time prices dropped, leaving mortgaged farms and no high-priced market. To-day many of the mortgages have been paid off or greatly reduced, and prices for what they raise are still high, but the farmers should not continue to expect those prices to continue to advance. When and where it will stop is within the hands of congress, and the farmers should not forget that there are five urban votes to each one on the farms. When the families of the towns and cities get fed up with paying exhobitant prices for farm products they will appeal to their representatives at Washington and congress will act. The farmers must moderate their demands if they are to be allowed to continue a reasonable degree of prosperity. Just remember those five urban votes to one farm vote!

People on both the east and west coasts are clamoring for the installation of radar signal stations on both coasts as protection against Russian bombing planes. Congress made an appropriation for such installation, but nothing is being done. It is all talk and no action. That could be a job for the corps of engineers instead of the building of needless and expensive projects on which they are engaged, and which we could get along without.

We can do much, if we will, in the 18 months before England expects Stalin to start war.

—o—

The farmers need to beware of the five votes in the cities and towns to the one on the farms. To demand too high a price for their farm products could be an expensive demand.

—o—

As I knew Paul Appleby, his endorsement of Secretary of State Acheson would be more a liability than an asset.

Be Safe – Observe Signs, Warnings

Safe driving is a matter of proper attitudes as well as skill, according to the California Highway Patrol. The skill required to guide a car safely through heavy traffic is high, the Patrol pointed out, but it is not beyond the capacity of most persons.

"The trouble is that the development of proper attitudes has not kept pace with engineering and enforcement," the Patrol said. "Every driver knows he should signal his turns or intentions. Even the dullest know that it may be fatal to race a train to a gradecrossing. But many otherwise normal drivers occasionally take chances, often with tragic results.

"The failure of drivers to observe the rules of the road, traffic signs and posted warnings—at all times—will build habits and attitudes that sooner or later will bring them to grief.

"Traffic laws are based upon common sense and the necessity of sharing the roads with millions of other persons. Motorists break or disregard them at their peril."

All throughout the Nation, the contemptuous chiseling of relief benefits is raising the ire of conscientious legislators.

In California, Assemblyman Richard J. Dolwig of San Mateo County, Chairman of a legislative committee investigating unemployment insurance problems, reveals that widespread, cynical flaunting of the law, through loop-holes, is draining the Unemployment Insurance Fund of an estimated $60,000,000 a year, and endangering the solvency of the fund.

The latest dodge, Dolwig reports, is the "husband and wife racket." In this case the system, as reported to Dolwig's committee, works as follows.

"A husband and wife merely take turns being unemployed. While one works the other draws unemployment insurance benefits by staying home,"—and it's legal!

An extremely interesting remedy for relief chiseling is being proposed in some other states. Quite an agitation has begun in the East to get at the root of the problem and force public inspection of relief rolls as a curb to fraud and political vote-buying.

To qualify for federal funds, which help to defray costs of some relief programs, the States must comply with conditions imposed by the Federal Government, and one of the conditions is that the names of persons receiving relief, and the amounts received, must be kept secret.

In Indiana, Hoosier legislators are in open rebellion. They are willing to risk losing from $15,000,000 to $19,000,000 a year in federal relief funds by insisting on opening welfare rolls to the press and prosecutors. Senator John W. Van Ness states "Indiana taxpayers poured more than one billion dollars into the federal coffers in 1950 and got back less than 5 percent"—and he made it clear he thought Indiana could easily run its own welfare program without the government's money.

Another Indianan summed up the situation thusly: "The Nation has been drifting — people and States—passively toward Socialism. Nobody bucks the handout. The result is that you give the Federal Government a ham and get back a wiener."

One thing is certain. If relief rolls were open to public scrutiny, a lot fewer chiselers would be rushing in to bilk the public, the public would save millions in needless tax expense.

For instance, the "husband and wife racket" in unemployment insurance benefits uncovered by Assemblyman Dolwig's committee, would find the going substantially tougher if those people applying for unemployment relief were subject to having their names published in the paper. The public and prosecutors, both undoubtedly would weed out most of the chiselers almost immediately. With $60,000,000 tax dollars a year at stake, can we afford a secrecy blanket?

Sparks

FROM THE NEWS CIRCUIT
JAMES DORAIS

When the Kefauver Investigating Committee swung through the California circuit, some mighty curious performances were enacted for the edification of the public.

The witness who promised to pay by check instead of with cash from now on furnished outstanding entertainment for a large television audience.

Various other characters, including mining stock salesmen, internal revenue agents and entrepeneurs of questionable business enterprises, also played to an appreciative house.

But Californians shouldn't think the home State has a corner on talent. Some of the performances in other circuits were pretty good, too.

For example, a Chicago newspaper reports that one Harrington E. Drake appeared before the Senate crime committee at a recent hearing in that city with a plaintive complaint to make. "Crooked" competition, he alleged, has cut into his business profits alarmingly.

According to Mr. Drake, he used to do a business of about $400,000 a year. Then about four years ago, the "old Capone mob" bought up a competing company and took a good half of his business away from him. Mr. Drake is still doing pretty well, but he was naturally indignant that mobsters could move into a legitimate business field and presumably through racketeering methods, take many of his best customers away from him.

What is Mr. Drake's business? He has two firms: one which manufactures his wares, and a second, the K. C. Card Co., which distributes them. According to the latter company's catalogue, the most important items manufactured by Mr. Drake are loaded dice and marked cards.

Mr. Drake makes no bones about the fact that his business is supplying gambling houses with loaded ones to gyp the customers. Apparently it's perfectly legal Customers can buy simple "edge-work" ivories at only $2 a pair or they can go all out and get real quality products for miss outs or passing for $30 a pair. The K. C. Card Co. carries a complete line.

The catalogue also offers bargains in punchboards. K. C. punchboards have a "secret code" which tips off the storekeeper to the winning numbers so that he can punch them out before setting the board up on the counter.

Mr. Drake runs a good, honest business selling devices to cheat the patrons of gamblers who operate illegally He feels he's entitled to protection from Uncle Sam from crooked competitors.

The Kefauver hearings have had a good run wherever they've played, including California. But the Chicago performances must have been tops.

Words of Wisdom

Jackie Gleason, Hollywood comic—"In the old days girls used to complain they had nothing to wear—now they just go on television."

James B. Black, S. F., Pres. PG&E—"Probably one of the most vicious untruths propagandized by those hostile to our way of life is that the wealth of the Nation is concentrated in the hands of a few."

Dr. Paul Popenoe, Director, Amer. Institute of Family Relations, in Calif.—"It takes more loyalty and faith now to raise a family and prepare them for life, than ever before in the history of civilization."

Andrew T. Jergins, Long Beach businessman—"I'm tired of the way the Administration is blowing up the Russian war scare to cover up New Deal policies."

D. A. Thomas C. Lynch, S. F. —"With war clouds on the horizon, the black market may be with us in the next six months or a year—but with honest cooperation we can stamp it out."

Ideals are like tuning forks—sound them often to bring your life up to standard pitch.— S. D. Gordon.

CAPITOL - COUNTY News Letter

BY ASSEMBLYMAN RALPH R. CLOYED

The California State Legislature reopened Monday, March 12, and wasted little time getting down to work. Committees went to work grinding out bills so that members had measures before them by Wednesday; especially non-controversial matters.

This session must adjourn at the end of 120 calendar days. This limitation was voted by the people when they approved a Constitutional Amendment in 1949. Many are already complaining that there will be insufficient time to consider the 5176 bills and possibly another 240 bill's which may be introduced during the session as well as 200 other resolutions, etc.

The Ways and Means Committee has the State budget for the 1951-52 fiscal year on the floor awaiting roll call.

The joint legislative budget committee in its report recommended against establishing a program to aid the needy disabled. The estimated cost to the State would be $32,937,000.

Governor Earl Warren has advocated the new category in line with House Resolution 6000 amending the Federal Social Security law.

This could be one of the big controversies and probably will rank with the SB 1228 and AB 3223, the Hot Cargo Bill, and AB 375, which boosts unemployment benefits from $25 to $40 per week and AB 3376, liberalizing the disability insurance from $25 to $35 a week.

Assemblyman Geddes said this represents a compromise by the California State Federation of Labor, insurance companies, and representatives of management.

Opposition to the compromise has developed in the Legislature. Assemb'yman Harold K. Levering, Chairman of the Industrial Relations Committee, charged that organized labor used boycott threats against certain insurance companies to force them to support the measure and asserted the measure would bankrupt the disability fund.

Senate Bill 327 exempting rural electric cooperatives from regulation of the California Public Utility Commission is being fought by the major power companies. The bill, designed to help cooperatives secure Federal financing, is attacked as leaving a dangerous loophole which will break down the Public Utility Commission as there is nothing to prevent cooperatives from going into the business of generating power, as it is not limited to rural areas.

The subcommittee of the Assembly listened for 5 hours to testimony both for and against the measure, but reached no decision. The bill was passed by the Senate in January, then blocked in the Assembly. It wound up in the subcommittee as Governor Warren urged reconsideration.

The defeat on the flood of AB 10 by Collier designed to curb the activities of George McLain would have prohibited soliciting funds from persons receiving aid from the State. Collier said he will press for action on a new bill regulating the solicitation from pensioners.

The measure would give the Welfare Board the power to subpoena the records of any organization to ascertain if there is a violation of the solicitation ban. He believes it has a good chance to pass.

The Irish members of the Legislature took over Friday on adjournment to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. Members of both houses along with Governor Warren were delegates to the convention of Sons of Ireland. Bill O'Rosenthos was defeated by Thomas Maloney for President of the Convention. Maloney had the advantage with a shillelagh. The entertainers were composed of members of the Legislature and attaches of Irish decent.

Assemblyman Butters of Imperial County, and well-known in San Diego County, has notified friends that he may be permitted to attend the Legislature in a few weeks. He was injured in an automobile accident in which his wife was killed on the Ridge Route in January.

Three conventions in Sacramento this week were attended by people from San Diego County. Supervisors Robbins and Bird along with Art Eddy attended the supervisors' meeting.

James Archer, Klein and Dick Bergholz representing the county-wide reapportionment committee met with the legislators of San Diego, Riverside, Imperial and Orange Counties and worked out plans for redistricting the Assembly and Congressional districts. A plan has been developed that will probably meet with the approval of the four counties.

Lemon Grove School News

Lemon Grove School

Mrs. Hazel Schwalm, president, called an executive board meeting of the Lemon Grove School District Teachers' Association last Thursday evening. The board unanimously agreed that this association will provide the necessary funds for the school election campaign.

The proposed by-laws were discussed, and further revisions were recommended by the board. Plans were made for the sending of a delegate from the local club to the National Education Association Convention in San Francisco in July.

The next regular meeting of the entire group will be held on March 27.

Board members in attendance were Mmes. Nancy Tuthill, Jessie Snell, Lucille Hunt, Ovella Mason, Hazel Mulkey, Margaret Darroch, Evelyn Lauritzen, Dorothy Kennedy, and Harry Butler.

Mrs. June Mason's fifth graders, at Lemon Grove School, have been learning to square dance as part of their social studies unit, the Early Pioneers. Those boys and girls who excel will be selected to take part in the May Festival on May 11.

Many of the junior high homerooms held pre-Easter parties on Friday just prior to the Spring Vacation. Dancing was featured in all the classes, with student committees serving refreshments. Classes which joined in the festivities were 8-2, 8-3, 7-1, 7-2, and 7-3.

Teacher Group Meeting

At a meeting of representative teachers on Wednesday evening, Supt. Netzley discussed with them the campaign plans for the coming school election on April 13. The administrative staff, the teachers' association, the three P.-T.A.'s in the Lemon Grove District, and local civic groups will work together to explain the need for raising the present tax limit to all registered voters.

Residents are asked to call upon any member of the school faculty for a full explanation of this election, and clubs and other organizations will be sent well-qualified speakers on this vital subject upon request.

It was agreed that the district teachers' association will provide the funds to cover expenses resulting from the publicity campaign.

Attending were S. K. Solleder, Arthur Thomas, Ben Schei, Evelyn Lauritzen, Harry Butler, Hazel Schwalm, Margaret Darroch, Bob Sutton, Clarence Allen, Rita Von Meedon, Ruth Le Master, Alice See, Elizabeth Robbins and Virginia Cornelius.

The delegates from Grossmont Union High School to the annual convention of the Federation of Girl's Leagues of Southern California and Arizona were Kay Hogan, president; Peggy Williams, secretary; Barbara Lemke, dress regulation chairman; and Ethel Prosser, advisor. The convention was held at the Phoenix Union High School in Arizona. The theme, "Marriage as a Career," was carried out very successfully by means of speakers and group discussions.

Main speaker was Dr. Charles S. Kendall, pastor of the Central Methodist Church, who is well known in Phoenix for his work as a counselor on marriage. Delegates from Grossmont were guests in the homes of the local high school girls and they were royally entertained.

Students of Grossmont Union High School are required to register in order to vote in the Associated Student body election to be held on March 28. Students must show identification before they can register, and they must live in the district which will attend Grossmont next year. Last day for registering was Monday. The candidates are Stan Hawks and Douglas Brunson for president; Patsy Asquith and John Linden for vice president.

One of the requirements for all sophomores of Grossmont is a 100 problem mathematics test. As a result the sophomores took this test on Monday and Tuesday.

This test is designed to discover the arithmetic abilities of 10th graders. Those students who fail to pass this examination will be required to take a Senior Arithmetic course designed to bring the mathematic ability of the student up to the average level before he graduates from high school.

Senior Banquet

The Senior class is busy making preparations for the annual banquet, to be held March 17, in the Venetian Room of the Grant Hotel, San Diego. Students on the program are Shirley Chase and Lee Putney, dancers; and Barbara Alesch, monologist. Speakers will be L. F. Smith and Elizabeth Peters. "We hope all seniors will come. It isn't necessary to have a date," said Sallie Barnett, acting senior class president.

The Girl's Physical Education Department, under the direction of Venalee Field, conducted a full week's unit on Artificial Respiration which was completed March 2nd. This program included posters and announcements stressing the importance of artificial respiration, lectures and demonstrations on the methods of application, and an objective written examination on work covered, plus a practical activity test for each student. In these ways the girls not only learned how and why to use artificial respiration, but they also learned to apply resuscitation.

The special election for the Associated Student Body Commission for 1951-52 has been postponed until March 28. All students are required to register in order to vote in the election. Registration will close Friday, March 16. Anyone going to Grossmont next year and all seniors may vote.

Garey Brooks won a gold key in the Scholastic Award contest for his Bird of Paradise Lillies entered in the pictorial division. This picture will be sent to Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg, Pa., entered in the 24th National High School Art exhibit. Other winners: Richard Crawford, Shirley Roese, Violet Thomas, textile design on cloth; Pat Chapman, design; Joann Francisco, still life in oil; Paul Weber, water color of boats.

The Band and Orchestra Parents Club is staging a drive for sponsors during the months of March and April. The money collected from the drive will be used for scholarships. These scholarships will be presented at the "Awards Dinner" which will be held at the Grossmont cafeteria on June 4.

Sponsors are given free tickets to the "Awards Dinner," as well as to all concerts by the intrumental department at Grossmont. The names of the sponsors are also listed on all the programs. The "Awards Dinner," incidentally is a wonderful spread with turkey and all the trimmings and is alone worth the sponsorship contributed.

The usual sponsor donates $10, although a few wanted to give more. There are two categories of Patrons, those for $50.00 and the Honor Patrons for $500.00.

The Exchange Club and Kiwanis Club, both of La Mesa, have been Honor Patrons in past years.

Among the sponsors are Lemon Grove Lumber Co., Forward Club, Forward Club Juniors and Monterey Heights Civic Association.

Grossmont High has been invited to govern the City of El Cajon April 9 by the El Cajon Junior Chamber of Commerce which has been sponsoring Grossmont Day in the city for three consecutive years. During the day 25 or 30 city offices will be taken over by the students, while the city council, lawyers, judges and court officials will be replaced in the evening.

Seniors of Grossmont living in El Cajon are eligible to try out for the offices on March 26. L. A. Smith, Civics instructor, will teach interested students how to manage the offices efficiently so they may participate in the competitive choice.

The first meeting of the Helix organization committee was held Monday, March 12, at Grossmont to choose the school colors, adopt a constitution and set up a finance committee. The officers of the Helix Organization Committee are: Noel Mickelson, president; Bob Manning, vice president; Betty Vance, secretary; and Bill Dyer, publicity. Benton Hart opened the metting with an explanation of the situations at Helix.

Volunteering for the constitution committee were Bob Manning, Bill Hood, Bill Fleming, Carol Beighle, Pat McDernott, Toni Kelly, Marlene Marchese, Nancy Hogan, Kay McGraw, Tressie Severs, Carol Karns, Pat Johnson, Peggy Huwerton. On the finance committee are Carol Beighle, Jane Fisher, Marlene Dawson, Tressie Severs, Klarette Sawer.

The Junior ring committee, three sophomores from each school, has chosen a ring that has a removable head. If students transfer from Grossmont to Helix, they may change the name of the school on the ring.

The Helix football team will be in the City League and will be in the Football Carnival this season.

Tom Warburton explained that Cuyamaca Conference, to be held this year at Camp Marston would have at least 45 out of the 60 on the Helix Organization Committee. Both Grossmont and Helix will be evenly represented. Main topic this year will be the problems facing Helix High School.

Pathfinder Club at Adventist Church

A Pathfinder Club is being instituted at the Seventh-day Adventist Church on Monday evening at 7 o'clock under the direction of Leslie Miles, assisted by Milton Grimaldi, in the school building at rear of the church.

That fathers may be brought closer to their sons and mothers to their daughters, this project gives parents and Junior boys an opportunity to work together and play together for two hours each Monday evening.

There will be classes in crafts, Bible memory work, etc. Attendance is not restricted to church membership. Anyone interested is invited.

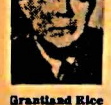
Howl For Winner Hurts Football

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE FESTIVE (after a fashion) game of football has its share of troubles today, but nothing that encroaches on education. Football is numerically too small to have any adverse effect on a student's career.



Grantland Rice

For example, in a midwest university of some 14,000 students you'll find around 100 football players. You will also find that in most cases the football player has to meet the same student requirements as anyone else. This isn't always true. There are colleges with low standards of admission and low student standards later on. But these are in the minority.

What is it about football that has caused Athletic Director Dick Larkin of Ohio State to label the game a "Frankenstein Monster"?

Apparently we have asked a question that we can't answer. What has hurt football is not only the demand for a winner everywhere—but also the various devices used in trying to get this winner.

You don't hear a demand from students or alumni for a winning baseball team—a winning crew—a winning basketball team—a winning track and field team—a winning hockey team. But if you have a losing football team for over a year the bowl that follows is heard around the world as the losing coach is catapulted into oblivion.

The alumni and student body or bodies take to the warpath in full war panoply, including tomahawks. As fine a game as football is, we can't see that its importance belongs above all other sports. It is difficult to call a sport amateur that takes in from $1,000,000 to $1,800,000 at the gate in one season for one team. No other sport can draw 100,000 people for one game and often turn another 100,000 away. The Army-Notre Dame game could easily have drawn over a million people at $5 a seat if there had been room enough. This is moving pretty high up for what was originally intended as "exercise, recreation and entertainment." A river is a fine thing for a community, but it isn't so helpful when it turns into a raging flood. A cooling breeze can be useful, but a hurricane or tornado seldom helps.

Suggested Cures

There is no questioning the fact that football's importance as a college sport should be brought back to the importance of other sports—if possible.

Many cures have been suggested. John Kieran, an ex-college athlete and a keen thinker, suggests that all gate receipts be abolished—as they are in some instances. That would be the complete answer.

Others have suggested the abolishing of all post-season and all Bowl games. This would reduce part of the annual autumn hysteria.

A big part of football's weakness is the pressure put upon college coaches. Such colleges as Princeton, Yale, Tennessee, Miami, Kentucky, etc., have answered this by signing coaches for 10 years or for life.

You can stop colleges from paying for talent, but no one yet has been able to think up a device that will stop alumni from offering under the table as much as $5,000 to a worthy athlete who can help win a few games. These outside funds often run from $100,000 to $150,000 a year. It costs around $750,000 to run a big-time football season.

A coach's job no longer consists of simply coaching a football team. He must become a touring orator, taking in banquets all over the map.

"I haven't been home with my family but two days since our season closed," one leading coach told me recently. "And that was over two months ago. If I have to look at rubber steak and stale potatoes again, I think I'll pick out some tall building for a jumping take-off."

Football is still a great game—one of the greatest of all competitive sports. It has simply been pushed into an importance it doesn't deserve. Just how to cure this overgrowth is something beyond our limited reach. Its so-called friends are the main wreckers.

The Big Smear

There have been intermittent scandal uprisings in sport between the Black Sox trouble of 1919 and the basketball mess of 1951. But these are the twin peaks of shame, corruption and complete crookedness. Baseball had a terrific letdown around 1918, 1919 and 1920 before Judge Landis took over in 1920. Any number of games were thrown by various teams and players in those three years. More than a few people knew about it.

Basketball has been under suspicion for some years. I first heard rumors of crooked play as far back as 1945. These rumors grew stronger in 1946 and 1947. They began to pick up force. Having little interest in basketball as a game to write about, or a game to watch, like many others I let these rumors slide.

Did You Know . . .?

The owl cannot move its eyes in their sockets but compensates by being able to rotate its head in a large arc of 273 degrees? Like other birds, the owl possesses good color vision. . . . The world's largest sheep, the Argali, lands on his horns instead of his feet, when he jumps? . . . The troublesome English "sparrow" is not a sparrow at all? He is a member of the weaver bird family of Europe. . . . "Heifer" is the modern spelling of two Anglo-Saxon words, head-fear, meaning "high ox," as the heifer seems to stand up extraordinarily high on her legs compared to a grown cow. . . . Tiny green plants called algae grow on the fur of the sloth, a South American animal that lives in trees? These plants provide camouflage for the sloth. . . . There are more than 7,000 different kinds of ants? . . . Naturalists who want to capture a snake uninjured may kill him with tobacco? They pin him down with a forked stick, push up his jaws and stuff tobacco down his throat with a twig. Tossed at the base of a tree as a landmark, he is picked up dead on the return trip. . . . Ducks die from eating bird shot? Spent shot that settles in feeding swamps may be swallowed by the ducks. Lead shot in the crop of a duck will cause its death from lead poisoning. . . . In dry climates meat is preserved simply by hanging it out to dry? This is the common method of making jerked venison or "jerky." . . . There is a legend that animals kneel to worship on Christmas Eve?

Education Needed

The average citizen must be brought to realize that the management of wildlife is no clear simple matter, that we are treating a living resource that is subject to a variety of influences, that only the most careful kind of management based on sound research findings can ever hope to provide the answer to our problem. The so-called "one gallus" hunter and fisherman must be brought to a point where he will voluntarily accept the findings and recommendations of his wildlife commission as to the management of the wildlife resource. This must be done, otherwise what excuse do we have for the existence of wildlife training schools, research units, laboratories, experiment stations, and scores of trained men who have given themselves years of professional training in the wildlife field?

This type of acceptance of the wildlife agency by the layman will not come by itself. There must be efficient wildlife administration, continued good research, intelligent dissemination of accurate information, long-range educational work, and a co-ordinated, good, public relations program.

In speaking of youth, here lies our very greatest hope in conservation education. It was Goethe who said that the destiny of any nation at any given time depends on the opinions of its youth. To be more specific, "it's young men under five and twenty."

Yeah, Why?

The United States is fighting Communist aggression with men, guns and planes in Korea, but on the other hand it continues to develop its trade with Russia, the birthplace of Communism.

Whenever Communists anywhere, whether they be the armies of North Korea or Red China or saboteurs in the United States, commit acts of aggression, it is an acknowledged fact that they do so under the leadership of Russia, and with Russia's full blessing.

When the United States continues normal trade relations with Russia, it is building up that country's dollar reserve so that it can better finance the Communist's disruptive tactics against the free nations of the world. Senator Milton Young has attempted to cut down the flow of dollars to Russia by introducing a bill to prohibit the importation of furs from Russia. He says this nation imports $59 million worth of raw furs per year from that fountainhead of Communism.

However, the U.S. tariff commission opposes the senator's bill, contending that the Russian furs do not compete to any great extent with American furs. We don't think the tariff commission is on sound ground when it makes this claim. While Russian furs may not be made from the same kind of animals that are the fur producers for the American market, to American womanhood a fur coat is a fur coat.

Sinking A Leader

There is hardly anything more pestiferous to the fly fisherman than a leader which won't sink when it should. For this aggravation there is always the fundamental answer of rubbing it with bankside mud.

To meet the problem in a more convenient, refined way, one may take along a bit of some abrasive soap, such as Lava, for instance, and rub the leader with this. It will do the job.

SHORT STORY

Instinct Wins

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

WHEN "SNICKER" Snyder, owner-manager of the Whirlwind baseball club, signed on a new player he always handed the newcomer a sheaf of typewritten papers and told him to read every line. Snicker was 50 years old and had been affiliated with baseball and baseball players all his life. The game had certain fundamental rules, certain regulations that Snicker felt no rookie could possibly acquire on either a home-town or a college team. Therefore he had written them all down and he made each new player read them.

When Jock Dudley was handed the sheaf of papers he stared at it blankly and grinned. Snicker said sharply: "You read 'em, young feller! Every danged word."

Butch Garrison, Snicker's head scout, had found Jock. Butch was enthusiastic: "The kid's a natural," he told Snicker. "He plays by instinct."

"Instinct be damned!" Snicker said sarcastically. "Some players are naturally good, but, by gum, I've been in the game long enough to know you gotta learn the fundamentals or you get no place!"

Three days later in the bullpen Snicker watched the new rookie throwing a few to old Dutch Feverell. Snicker flew off the handle. He could tell by the way Jock was throwing them that he hadn't read the typewritten sheaf of papers. He called Jock aside and laid into him.

But a week passed before Snicker was sure that Jock had read the typewritten rules. Then he wasn't satisfied.

"Maybe he read 'em," he snapped at Butch, "but they didn't do him much good. He ain't polished yet."

"He don't need to be polished," Butch says. "I tell you the boy is a natural."

"You're crazy! That stuff's for books. It don't happen."

"It is happening," said Butch. "The kid's throwing 'em and he's hitting 'em. What more do you want?"

"Polish," said Snicker. "He's got to do better."

Facts, however, are facts. Jock pitched in 10 games that season and won them all.

Snicker wasn't satisfied. He wouldn't admit that Butch was right. Yet at the same time he did confess that Jock was a profitable addition to the team.

PERHAPS Snicker was right in his insistence. At any rate, throughout the winter training, Jock steadily improved. He had acquired more polish. Snicker was almost satisfied.

"See!" he said to Butch. "What'd I tell you! The kid's been reading my rules. It's helping him."

"You're balmy," Butch replied. "The kid don't need rules."

And so the two old cronies continued to disagree throughout the summer. Jock Dudley brought laurels to the team.

Snicker was happy. He took all the credit for Jock's fame for himself.

Facts, however, are facts. Jock pitched in 10 games that season and won them all.

The only thorn in his rosebed was Butch. Butch insisted that Jock's greatness was due to no one but himself.

"You're sore," Snicker told him, "because folks are giving me the credit. Every one knows one knows it's them fundamentals I thought up that put Jock where he is. Instinct! Nuts!"

Butch was fed up. He got sore. He told Snicker a few things about himself that Snicker had never heard before. "If you were anything but pig-headed," Butch roared at him, "I'd have told you something long ago."

"Told me what?" yelled Snicker. "I'm always willin' to listen to reason."

"If the reason fits in with your ideas you are," Butch yelled back. "I'd a told you this long ago only I knew the kid was a natural, but you're so thick-headed you'd a thought he wouldn't make the grade unless he read your rules."

"He did read 'em!"

"Like hell he did! That kid that you're so sure got places because of your dunged old fundamentals can't read or write! He never read your paper because he couldn't. Now what do you think of that?"

And Snicker didn't snicker.

Joy In God

AN EDITORIAL

"REJOICE in the Lord always," says St. Paul, "and again I say, rejoice." The best Christians are the happiest. Bearing in mind how closely the upright cling to God—the source of all joy—it is easy to understand why this is so.

Some people picture the religious man as a somber, sad individual. They seem to think that piety and gloom go together. The truth is quite opposite. The genuinely spiritual person finds too much of joy in God ever to wear a long face.

Anyone's life can be a joyous one if it is filled with the buoyancy and exaltation that comes from friendship with God. We know that God is Love. He is also Hope and Cheer. It was never His will that we should be unhappy. Otherwise, He would never have called all men to share one day in His own everlasting glory.

Joy in God does not mean, of course, freedom from all worldly care or suffering. What it does mean is that nothing in the world can depress or estrange the heart lifted toward God in love and trust.

Pain and disappointment come to the spiritually joyful as to anyone else. But with this difference: the former, rather than becoming sad or anxious, know how to turn their crosses into blessings. They make gifts of them, as it were, to lay at the feet of the Lord. In return, God grants an even greater infusion of joy into their souls.

The key to happiness in God is service. The more we give to God, the happier we shall become. The zealous servant of God does not ask what he shall do; he is forever finding new ways of pleasing his Master. He discovers opportunities not only in prayer, but in conscientiously performing the ordinary duties of life and in helping his neighbor whenever possible.

Another man might work just as diligently and be just as charitable, but he might also lack the happy inspiration of referring all he does directly to God. The joyful servant of God does not miss any chance. He makes even a friendly smile a salute.

Clergyman Reveals Gambling Bribe Offer

NEW ORLEANS — A Jefferson Parish county clergyman testified before the senate crime investigating committee here that New Orleans gamblers tried to bribe him by the offer of an $80,000 new Sunday school building.

The Rev. Dana Dawson, 33, pastor of the Memorial Methodist church in Metairie, told the committee that gamblers offered him the building to keep quiet.

Ironing Pointers

To prevent ironing from drying out when you don't complete as much as you have sprinkled, I have several suggestions for you. Purchase a plastic pillow cover that will allow room for a large family's ironing. You will find that you will use less moisture for your clothes if they are wrapped in plastic and that they will not dry out as much while waiting to be ironed. When you have a few pieces left over or pieces that are hard to iron, place them in refrigerator. They will not dry out and due to the coldness they will be much easier to iron.

Filling Cream Puffs

A cake decorator is perhaps the handiest tool with which to fill cream puffs. After filling the decorator, insert the point of the tube into the side of the cream puff, and force the filling into the puff, thus filling every crevice.

Largest Republic

Brazil is not only the largest of the American republics, it is one of the three or four largest countries in the world. Occupying half of the South American continent, it extends 2,670 miles north and south and 2,690 miles on the east-west axis.

Getting the Bird

A man walked into a local pet shop the other day and asked for a canary. The proprietor brought out a lovely little bird singing merrily, but before our man could say anything, out was dragged a drab little sparrow huddled in the corner of his cage.

"You gotta buy these two together," announced the owner.

"I want the canary," said the man, "but what will I do with that stupid looking bird? He doesn't sing."

"The canary sings," said the shop-owner. "The other one is the arranger."

And That's That!

A wholesale dealer who had a lot of trouble in getting a certain retailer to pay his bills finally lost patience and wrote the merchant a threatening letter. He received the following reply:

"Dear Sir: What do you mean by writing me a letter like that?

"Every month I place all my bills in a hat and then figure out how much money I have to pay on my accounts. Then I have my bookkeeper draw as many bills out of the hat as I have money to pay.

"If you don't like my way of doing business, I won't even put your bills in the hat."

TOO MUCH SEASONING

Gracie: I'm hungry from all this shopping. Where can I get a ham sandwich?

Salesgirl: Why don't you try our mezzanine?

They Always Do

Tommy came home proudly from his first day at school.

"What did you learn in school?" asked his mother.

"Nothing," said Tommy; then, seeing the look of disappointment on her face, he added, "but I learned a lot during recess!"

WHAT PRICE FREEDOM?

"I want a puppy—a fidgety sort of puppy," said the man to the pet-shop clerk.

"A what, sir?"

"One that will make the wife say, 'For goodness' sake! Take that dog out for a walk!'"

Big Conference

Bill: There's a man coming over right away to discuss a big business deal with me. We're going to discuss the advisability of moving my shop to another location.

Beulah: Really, Bill? Who is the man?

Bill: My landlord.

Health Hint

About the healthiest form of exercise in the world is walking around the block—you don't have to cross a street!

AUSTERITY

Gracie Allen: Oh, good! The way or res have gone up we can certainly use it.

Tax assessor: You don't understand—

Gracie Allen: Oh, yes I do. I was just saying to my husband this morning, if they don't reduce the cost of living we'll just have to get along without it.

Modern Methods Used to Correct Eye Troubles

The average child wants to learn, he wants to be a scholar and know more than the other fellow. But if he happens to have poor vision, he cannot read quickly and intelligently. That means poor grades. He stops doing his home work. Time lays heavily on his hands and the disappointment could be deep enough to start him on the road to delinquency.

Parents should have their children's eyes tested by an optometrist to be certain that their children's eyes are functioning properly. A regular check-up of the eyes is just as important as for other parts of the body.

Poor vision does not always mean glasses. Many times the optometrist recommends orthoptics or visual training to re-educate the eyes and the muscles and nerves used in seeing.

An optometrist or eye doctor, call him what you will, is not in that field of serving humanity just to put glasses on those with visual defects, but to also help his patient correct the condition with modern means of exercise and establishment of good reading habits:
